A Mortgage On Our Future

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Ghairman . Sentincls of the Republic-

During the past few months America has established another record. It is a new high in government spending, in days of peace.

This is revealed in the recent re-port of the United States Treasury Department showing that since the beginning of the present fiscal year, on July 1, our Federal expenditures have surpassed the $3,000,000,000 June 30 (when the fiscal year ends) expenditures are expected to exceed $10,000,000,000. Only in war times have such records been surpassed.

Where are all those billions coming from?

Not current income! That can meet only about half the bill. The remainder becomes part of the growing Federal Deficit which the people must pay in taxes, direct and indirect, through the years to come.

It's a mortgage on our future; a lien placed by politicians and bureau-less Twenties - when they bought stocks on margin, or acquired homes and land under conditions which loaded them with heavy debts to be paid out of future income. And the American people realized a bit late—that the method had its flaws. Today they know that the national headache which we call Depression had some of its origin in the practice of spending not what they had, but what they hoped to

The workers and earners of America have learned their lesson. But the process of mortgaging their future has not ceased. It has simply changed. Today the politicians and the bureaucrats are mortgaging the future for them-by piling up expenditure after expenditure which the people must some day pay.

That's the ultimate effect of creating huge public debts and deficits. Office-holders and bureaucrats change with years. But the debts they create persist. Eventually they must be paid. The people, out of their labors, out of their carnings, out of their savings are the ones who foot the bill.

Until the bill is paid those debts remain-a mortgage on the future of every citizen on whose labors depend not only the support of him-self and his family, but the strength

POTATO ACT NOW LAW; SOUTHERN STATES FIRST

Provisions of the Potato Act of 1935 as they apply to potatoes harvested and sold on or after December 1, 1935, became effective at midnight on November 30.

"Potatoes harvested and sold after that time are to be handled in accordance with the allotment, packaging and stamp features of the Act," says A. K. Gardner, state notato agent in charge of the potato program in Maine.

Growers and handlers who sponsored the Potato Act from its inception more than a year ago are watching with interest the initial application of its provisions in the states of Florida and Texas and in southern California. establish a peace that would last all time to come.

It was for this purpose that the eague of Nations idea was brought orth, an idea which would have all isputing nations bring their conroversles before a world court, to rbitration or to the attention of he council of the league before esorting to warfare. To punish naions which went to war without est attempting to have their diffiullies straightened out in this manser, the member nations were greed to take sanctions against

As a further assurance against the Kellogg peace pact, defiment of national policy and recog-ling the settlement of disputes only through peaceable means, was universally signed.

The league, as an instrument of international peace, had two strikes alt before it began to operate, and hose two strikes were the United States and Russia. With these two meat powers outside the league, the eration of sanctions was always be a difficult matter; the fact that other nations later withdrew from the league only served to make

The Kellogg pact, which was gore fortunate in that it gained iniversal acceptance, was a cripple tecause it provided no real means of enforcing its provisions.

Peace of "Status Quo."

It was not long before it became apparent that the league, devised tid formed as it was by the victodous nations, was an instrument for maintaining peace strictly in the sense that it was intended to mainuln the status quo at the end of

For about ten years this was were or less satisfactory, principalbecause the nations were physkally and financially exhausted by te war. But by 1031 It became apparent that all of the nations were not natisfied with the status quo, especially those nations whose poptation was ever-expanding and for shose industrial products it was seconing more and more necessary find a new market.

Since that time there have been bur outstanding incidents which are indicated that, to be successhi, the lengue needs some sort of bistering up, some power of mainbining a peace other than merely the status aut of 1919, and further means of enforcing its decisions.

The first of these was the invation of Manchuria by the Japanese, thich violated everything from the Washington treaties and the Kellogg Met to the league covenant and Roberts' Rules of Order. In the aldst of the World war of words talch ensued. Japan quit the

The fourth is the and other engines of militaristic would cost less-perhaps ten times abide by the covenant-that is, by the status quo. They are of little assistance in eliminating the causes of war. And if war is ever to become a thing of the past, if civilization is ever to survive, the causes of war must be removed.

Accordingly, a suggestion of far deeper effect, and of far greater courage and thought is that of Sir Samuel Hoare, the British foreign____. secretary, that an inquiry be conducted into the distribution of raw materials, "so that all fear of exclusion or monopoly may be removed for all time."

"Expanding Population."

The desire so often expressed for room for expanding populations is largely a pose, for history has shown that very little of the population of the colonizing country ever moves into the colony. There are today only about 300,000 Europeans in the entire African continent, outside the Union of South Africa and some of the colonies bordering the Mediterranean sea.

The problem is an economic one which can be removed, Sir Samuel feels, by the institution of equitable trading rights in many of the mandated areas. During the war, raw materials were controlled by governments, and were bought and sold to other governments, at fixed prices. Since the war this buying and sell-Ing has returned to private hands and it is not a question of governmental allocation at all.

There are certain abuses which must be avoided or corrected if the free trade principle can be started with respect to colonial mandates. There must be no monopolies which will result in prices that are excessive to the disadvantage of importers, and there must be assurance that prices do not show too much of an advantage to the countries possessing the colonies. Then, too, It must be assured that there will be no deprivation in case of war.

In such a conference about raw materials, it would be necessary to put some sort of International conproduction and raise prices. It must be done without regard for nationality. I'robibitions of materials to any country or countries for special reasons should not be done without international agreement.

'The British Trades Union Congress, with 3,000,000 members, as well as other organizations, has advocated what amounts to a general pooling of all the raw material resources of the world's colonies (except those which are self-governing). Ernest Blvin, leader of the Trades Union Congress, has said: "If raw materials were socially owned, internationally controlled and produced according to the world's requirements, and could be obtained by every industrial nation by purchase and not by conquest. 50 per cent of the causes of war would be removed."

Sir Samuel Houre's suggestion is to "summon a world economic conference and to place upon its agenda the international control of the sources of supply of raw materials. with the application of the principle of economic equality of opportunity to all nations in the undeveloped regions of the earth."

The next move seems to be up to the lengue.

In the four incidents named it has become apparent that world place very deep. opinion does not mean much when It comes to halting an aggressor tirety.

To remedy this situation, one school of thought, notably typefied by the Istrative and operative, just as League of Nations union movement in Great Britain, recommends administration would be under a an international police force, under group of officers elected by the nathe administration of the league, to take the place of all existing these officers would come from the military bodies. At least the combination of all air forces, both military and civil in Europe, would eliminate war on that continent. and would tend toward the Improvement of European air service generally, is the contention.

SYNOPSIS

As Alan Garth, prospector, is preparing to leave for his mining claim in the Far North, a plane lands at the sirways emergency station. In are Burton Ramill, millionaire ining magnate; his daughter, Lilth; and Vivian Huxby, pilot and mining engineer. Believing him to only an ignorant prospector, the men offer to make an air trip to Garth's claim, although, they refer to his samples of platinum-bearing ore as nearly Ramill, product of the jazz age, shows her contempt for farth. Through Garth's guldance the lane soon reaches the claim site. Huxby and Ramill, after making several tests, assure Garth his claim nearly valueless, but to "encourage" young prospectors they are villing to take a chance in investing small amount. Sensing treachery head. Garth secretly removes a part rom the plane's motor. Huxby and with taunt Garth with his "gullibility." but their tone changes when they try to start the crippled plane. Returning to shore they try to force Barth to give up the missing part, farth manages to set the monoplane drift and the current carries it over he falls. He points out to the enraged trio that he is their only hope in guiding them out of the wilderness. Garth begins the work of preparing for the long journey. He inand his daughter must be hardened for the hardships ahead in their toilome trek to the outpost on the Mackenzie.

"That depends, sir. Perhaps 1 did not wish to part company with you so soon. Over at the river. I could of course have invited myself to fly out to Fort Smith with you. But that would hardly have given us time to get acquainted. As it is, in the weeks of close companlonship to come we may even learn to be friends."

Mr. Ramill frowned. "Is that a taunt, or maudlin sob stuff?"

"Then what's your game? If you think, after marconing us here in these d-d wilds you can win our friendship or gratitude by guiding us out, you're a sadly mistaken rourg man."

Garth agreed. "It would be a stupld mistake to expect anything decent of you or your daughter or Huxby. But think what fun I've already had, facing that pistol and felling Huxby he dared not use it." "Fun? You must be crazy!"

"Not at all. I had him sized up. laugh."

The big man chewed on this. That's clear enough But why wreck the plane? Will your next to see the point, "You win. I join joke be to walk off and leave us to up."

"Does it look that way? Two moose make a deal of eating."

As Garth spoke, he pointed ahead at the red chunks on the spruce branches. Almost at the same instant his ride jerked up. The secend shot was followed by a snarling equall. The squall shrilled into a brick that nipped of into silence. | silent. When Mr. Ramill rather hesitating legs of moose, he saw a threefoot, stub-tailed wildcat with blackser of moose meat. A second cat, slightly larger, had leaped several jards away before dropping.

They came back to the camp with Mr. Ramill panting and sweating. Garth swung lightly ahead of him. He slipped off his heavy pack and stood looking at the idle couple on the rill bank. They had eaten their fill of liver, and stretched out to rest. No smoke was rising from the embers of the smudge-fire. Flies were beginning to cluster on the moose tongues and other meat.

The girl met his look with contemptuous indifference. Huxby stared with bloodshot hostility from between his swollen eyelids.

Instead of speaking to the couple Garth addressed the girl's father as he relieved him of the lynx pack: "As I remember, sir, I told Miss Ramill she could cook on the smudge-fire if she kept it going, I will say now that I do not intend to shoot any more meat until use is made of what we have. There are none too many rifle cartridges. If the three of you prefer rotten, maggoty meat, I'll go you to the last mouthful. I've lived for weeks at a time on spoiled fish and rotten walrus."

Huxby's face and neck were as swollen and sore as if covered with bolls. His temper was no less sore. "You're the one who put us in this fix, you wood louse!"

Garth gave him a pitying look, "That's the fly venom talking. No cool, calculating schemer in his right senses would ask for trouble when his hands were tied. I might point out, however, that the venom was due to your haste in trying to -uh - appropriate my discovery claim."

"That's a lie. You cast the plane adrift. I was stung while trying to save it. Curse the luck! I came within an ace of reaching the snagged line. Almost had it, when the plane dragged it loose and went down over those hellish falls!"

"I might remind you that you ordered me to cast off the line—at the point of your pistol,"

Huxby. He sat sllent. Garth went on with his quiet argument:

"All that is now past history. We're more concerned with the present and future. Mr. Ramill has shown common sense by facing the facts of the situation. He has fallen The game was to let him think he into line. The question is, do you had me trapped, then give him the and Miss Ramill throw in with us, or do you go on your own? If with us. But if simmered for a day or two, a single moose muzzle will give us several delicious meals of what might be called aspic jelly." This won no sign of interest from the girl. She was no longer hungry.

Garth ignored her silence. "After starting that dish, you may cook as much more of the liver as your father can eat. He will keep on resting while Huxby and I go for another load of moose meat."

He unbuckled his pack, slung the pack-board on his back, and picked up his rifle and belt-ax. Huxby trailed after him out of camp. They walked in Indian file all the way around to the muskeg swamp, Huxby with his gaze fixed coldly upon the back of his leader.

At the swamp Garth cut a totepole and passed it through the tendons of two hindquarters of moose. The remaining quarter he strapped to his pack-board. He folded the second lynx skin for Huxby to use as a shoulder pad. Upon it the mining engineer rested his end of the tote-pole.

Though Garth had no pad, he stoed up with the moose quarter on his back and lifted his end of the pole to his shoulder. But he was accustomed to packing. He bore The thrust proved too much for the meat on his pack-board and his half of the two quarters on the pole with as little difficulty as Huxby toted the other end of the pole.

When the reached the camp Miss Ramill and her father were out gathering wood. At one end of the fire, thick smoke was rising from green sticks and leaves; at the other end, the pan of sliced muffle was boiling hard. After he and Huxby had lifted the moose quarters upon the rack. Garth brought water in the aluminum pet and cooled down the stew to simmering heat. Miss Ramill had much to learn about the cullnary art.

After the meal Garth glanced at the red after-glow of sunset.

"Mr. Ramill, the leanto and blan ket are for you and your daughter. Huxby can take the lee side of the fire. I'll keep it going. Turn in whenever you please."

A yawn surprised Lillth Ramill into a mocking laugh. She turned to her swollen-faced flance.

"What a howling farce, Vivian! Can you imagine me going to roos! at sunset, instead of sunrise?"

Huxby forced a smile and felt at a particular sore cluster of blics on the back of his neck. Mr. Ramill east a wistful glance towards the leanto.

high seas in viking ships and sailed up the Thames with Henghist and Horsa," Huxby sat up, blinking. The thin shake-down of moss and spruce tips had done little to soften the stony ground. He rubbed his stiffened back and hips, "Confound those rocks !"

The engineer looked at the partly eaten steak in Garth's hand. "How about breakfast?"

"Help yourself to all you want. Along with your own, you might broll steaks for Miss Ramill and her father. Miss Ramill is about to take a lesson in sewing. She will soon need a pair of moccasins."

The last remark checked the girl's intended refusal. While Huxby sullenly cut the three steaks and started to cook them, she carried out Garth's suggestion to grease her lynx skins with a chunk of fat.

When Garth finished his meal, he threaded a needle with a smoked catgut and showed the girl how to sew the thick moosehide. Holes punched with the awl made the work fairly easy. Within a few minutes she caught the knack of handling the awl and needle. Though her stitches were irregular, they promised to hold. He cut out the mate of the first moccasin, and another pair smaller in size,

Mr. Ramill crawled from the leanto, stiff, hungry and irritable. But sleep and the open air had whetted all appetites. As with the broiled liver, the three chechancos-millionaire, mining engineer and fastidlous heiress—went at the hot meat with fingers and teeth. They were down to bedrock-to the fundamentals of living. All the elegancies of civilized eating were absent, even the supposed necessities - forks. plates, seasonings. Yet the essentials femained. They were hungry, and here was food. It was neither as tender nor as savory as had been the liver. None the less, it was food.

At the end of the meal, Garth said that the first need was to fetch in the foreleg of moose. Miss Ramili rose with her father and Huxby.

"Sorry," Garth told her. "Your father needs all the walking he can get. Someone must stay to mind the fire. I might mention there's a shallow rock pool a little way along Huxby took Ramill's arm and started off with him after Garth.

This time, instead of lynx mates, a family of wolves were feasting on and pitch mosquito dope. My final the moose meat. At sight of the men, the whole family bristled and growled, but started a slow retreat.

As if in answer to the question, a snarling growl far deeper than that of the wolves came from the border of the muskeg where Garth had killed the bull moose. Up out of the thicket reared a huge gray hend. Massive forelegs stroked apart the willow stems with chisellike claws eight inches or more long.

It was a grizzly-a full-grown ursus horribilis. Garth believed the beast to be as large as those monsters of the same breed that ruled "Cut me a steak off that nearest over the southern Rockles and the leg of moose. Town Climbs the Rock.

The town begins at the shore of Gibraltar, It is known to every portion of the town, making wheeled Fishermen have built, however, small villages in the few recesses which are reached by narrow paths.

Between Spain and the British territory is a narrow strip of land called the neutral zone where travelers get the best land view of the one of the Pillars of Hercules of ancient times.

The rock's highest point is more than twice the height of the Washington monument or about 100 feet higher than the world's inliest building. Since the Moors first occupled Gibraltar centuries ago, its face has frequently undergone "treatment," A fortified castle dating back to Moorish occupation still stands in one of its recesses, sharpin places its rough "countenance" of the town. In natural caves in the rock live the famous Gibraltar monkeys, probably the only montimes. The animals are protected by law and are fed by the British rock, which was called Mount Abyla

The city took its name from the ish chief, Tarik-Ibn-Zeyad, landed on the rock and called it Gibel-Tarik or Mountain of Tarik, of which "Gibraltar" is a corruption.

The Moors had held Gibraltar for six centuries when in 1309 the Spanish selzed it, but 24 years later the Moslems regained possession. It became Spanish territory again in 1462. The British have held the rock since 1704 when they defeated a combined Spanish and French fleet. Since, the British have had frequent wars over Gibraltar's possession. One Spanish siege lasted four years (1779-1783).

Malta a Strong Base.

For more than a century Malta has sheltered powerful British warships guarding sea lanes to Mediterranean ports, and, in more recent years, to India, Australia, and the Far East via the Suez canal. Now it is a strong aerial base as Malta deserves attention, how ever, for other than military or strategic reasons. On the little island an ancient race still lives and speaks an otherwise extinct tongue. Recently Great Britain suspended Malta's constitution to combat a movement to turn Malta to the Italian language in preference to English or the islander's own unique speech.

Planted by fate at a strategic point on one of the world's great marine highways, this drab piece of land, less than a hundred square miles in area, has been called to fill an important role in the history of the world.

Maita and its satellite Islands were once linked to Africa and Europe by a land bridge. With the sinking of this link, the islands were left standing like sentinels between the eastern and western basins of the Mediterranean, 58 miles from Sicily and 180 miles from Africa, near the narrowest part of the sea.

BEDTIME STORY By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE HUNTER LOSES HIS TEMPER

THE hunter, hidden near the I nond of Paddy the Beaver, chuckled silently. That is to say, he laughed without making any sound. He had watched Mr. and Mrs. Quack feeding along the edge of the pond down toward Paddy's dam, behind the end of which Reddy Fox had been hidden. Reddy had been waiting for those Ducks just as the hunter himself was waiting for Lightfoot the Deer. Then along came Sammy Jay and spied Reddy

Fox. At once he had begun to scream at the top of his lungs. "Thief! Thief! Thief! Mr. and Mrs. Quack had understood him perfectly. They swam out to the middle of the pond while Reddy Fox, knowing that it was useless to stay longer with Sammy Jay Malta has been called the step- about, had snarled angrily and then

The hunter thought It a great joke on Reddy. To tell the truth. he was very much pleased. He that pond for some days, and he planned to return there and shoot ns do the British men-of-war today. Among the upper classes and the younger generation it is being replaced by English and Italian.

Weaving a pattern of mystery over the island are deep parallel lines in the solid rock, believed to be the tracks of ancient cart wheels. Some plunge beneath an arm of the sea and reappear on the other side-testimony to the comings and goings of a people who dwelt here before the land assumed its present shape. Neolithic temples also have been found.

Christianity was brought to Malth in 58 A. D. by a castaway on its shores—the Apostle Paul, Fifteen centuries later this island, thrust out toward the East and Africa, won the name of "the shield of Christendom" when the vallant Knights of Malta beat back the Turkish hordes. In memory of the victory the grand master founded Valetta, a city "built by gentlemen for gentlemen."

The knights, their power declining, eventually were expelled by Napoleon Bonaparte, who entered the harbor in 1708 on his way to Egypt. A revolt against the French garrison, combined with the assistance of the British fleet under Lord Nelson, resulted in surrender of the Islands in September, 1800, and since that time they have been onder British rule.

One of the world's most thickly nopulated small Islands, Malta domiciles more than 234,000 people. Strangely, it is an Island without lake or stream. The soll and porous sandstones absorb the rainfall like blotting paper.

them after he had got Lightfoot the Deer. He wanted to get Light foot first, and he knew that to shoot at anything else might spoll his chance of getting a shot at Light

"Sammy Jay did me a good tum" thought the hunter, "although he doesn't know it. Reddy Fox cur. tainly would have caught one of those Ducks had Sammy not come along just when he did. It would have been a shame to have one of them caught by that fox. I mean to get one and, I hope, both of them myself."

Now when you come to think of it, it would have been a far greater shame for the hunter to have killed Mr. and Mrs. Quack than for Reddy Fox to have done so. Reddy was hunting them because he was hongry. The hunter would have shot them for sport. He didn't need them. He had plenty of other food, Reddy Fox never kills just for the pleasure of killing.

So the hunter continued to sit in his hiding place with very friendly feelings for Sammy Jay, Sammy watched Reddy Fox disappear and then flew over to that side of the pond where the hunter was. Mr. and Mrs. Quack called their thanks to Sammy, to which he replied that he had done no more for them than he would do for anybody, or than they would have done for him.

For some time Sammy sat quietly in the top of the tree, but all the time his sharp eyes were very busy. By and by, he spied the hunter sitting on the log. At first he couldn't make out just what it was he was looking at. It didn't move, nevertheless Sammy was suspicious Presently, he flew over to a tree where he could see better. Right away he spied the terrible gun and he knew just what it was,

Once more he began to yell, hunter lost his temper. He knew that, now he had been discovered by Sammy Jay, it was useless to remain there. He was angry clear through. He no longer had a friendly feeling for Sammy Jay.

Friendly Trees

On the edge of the vast African desert, where no grass or other vegetables can grow, the date palm supplies the wants of the North African races to a wonderful extent, says a writer in Pearson's Weekly. Its ripe fruit is delicious; camels feed on the stones; baskets. mats and brushes are made of the tree's leaves, thread and rope from its fiber, and a spirituous liquor from its sap. There is also the Trave elers' Palm, which grow in Madagascar, often in the most arld parts of the country far away from rivers. The thirsty traveler has only to pierce a leafy branch of the palm and at once he can obtain a plat of pure, cool water.

Our Scotch Neighbor

PANTA MONICA, CALIF.— When I first knew him, he was plain John Buchan, writing the best Scotch novels since Robert Louis Stevenson. Then, in 1918, he was Colonel John Buchan of the British wartime press bureau, shrewd, kindly, and deft, handling a bunch of rampaging American correspondents as gently as though they were so many new-laid eggs and he, personally, had laid every last one of them. When he became Sir John Buchan, a lot of us said: "Well, he earned his honors but no title can ever small that Scot's head." Now, at Ottawa, the flags and the cannon roar for Baron Tweeds-Irvin S. Cobb muir, governor general of our noble neighbor nation to the north, but, if his lordship doesn't mind, I'd like, personally, to go on thinking of him as my friend, John Buchan, a very great gentleman.

They'll like him up there, we're going to like him down here. And, if any of you Canadians has any doubt as to his diversified talents, wait till you see him casting a troutfly across a likely pool.

Fashions for Men

TRUE to recent promises, we I now offer our winter fashion hints for men.

Lounge effects will be in evidence on park benches. Unless prosperlty returns mighty soon, expect a continuance of the high polish noted during recent years in connection with the seats of blue serge pants. Elbows also will display a brighter sheen or patina.

Trousers may or may not be turned up at the bottoms. It depends on whether wearers are sensitive about fringes or just naturally don't give a dern.

There will be very little changein many cases, no change whatsoever-in the pockets of business

However, the careful dresser will ask the tallor to install a special receptacle for carrying tax notices in. A favored perfume will be attar of moth balls.

Being an Actor

MAN spends half a lifetime try-A ing to learn to write, and, it he succeeds, he's lucky; and if he doesn't, he's like a fellow whose wife is being talked about-probably the last man in town to hear! the bad news.

But, overnight, you can get to be ! an actor-at least you can get the actor's viewpoint, For instance, I've fust finished a very bitter argument at the studio over the next picture we're going to shoot. There's a director who insists on cluttering up the show with a lot of other people. He's also very tiresome about dragging in a plot.

I still feel I have the right idea about a proper vehicle for the display of one's theatrical talents. It's a two-hour monologue, Inter-

"White Woman's Town," Name of Indian Village

Mary Harris or May Harris, reputed to have been the first white woman resident in Ohlo, was in her infancy stolen by the Indians. She became the wife of Eagle Feather, a prominent warrior and chief, when she was living in the Indian village on the Muskingum at the age of twenty-five or thirty. This was between 1730 and 1740.

This white woman served her redskin husband dutifully, often accompanying him on his buffalo hunts, and whenever he went off with a war party to bring home a few scalps she mixed his war paint and applied it to his face, thus pluming him for the battles.

Especially careful was she to polish his hatchet on soapstone, the scalps for the wigwam.

So popular did the Harris woman become that the Indian vilinge of her chief was called "the White Woman's Town," and the river be side which it lay was known as "the White Woman's creek."

It was this same Indian chief-Engle Fenther - who one other time brought home another white woman as his new bride. She was known as the "Newcomer," and was executed by the tribesmen after Eagle Feather was found with a tomaliawk in his scalp. Because she fled suspicion rested on her.

We are reminded of her martyrdom by the present city of Newcomerstown.-Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Baily's Beads

Bally's beads are a phenomenon seen during a total eclipse of the sun. Just before the moon's disc completely cover the sun the narrow crescent of sunlight is broken in several places, giving an appearance roughly compared to a string of beads. This is due to irregularity (mountains and valleys) on the edge of the moon's disc. These beads were named after Francis Bally, noted English astronin Rouen Museum Exhibit An unusual museum is situated in this ancient capital of Normandy, writes a Rouen, France, United Press correspondent. It is a museum containing specimens of the Maybe it's a good thing to elect art of the iron worker and locksmith through the ages.

The collection was started with the acquisition of a few curious keys by a native of Rouen, Jean Louis Le Secq, and then became a life passion with him and with his son, Henri, who continued the work after his father's death.

The museum includes primitive surgical instruments, strong boxes with complicated locks, ancient iron work signs and numerous religious relics. One of the latter is an elaborate creche, or manger, surmounted by a crown which hung on a chain from the roof of a church. On It are the words:

"This was given by Charles Le Jeune and Marie Briault, his wife, both of this said parish, and for whom a Te.Deum shall be chanted every Sunday as long as the creche shall last, 1743."

Three large cases at the museum contain only English keys of all varieties, including one which bears the royal monogram and the words "Horse Guards."

Much of the collection in the museum dates back to the early days when every worker belonged to a trade guild, and before he could become a master of his craft he had to produce a masterpiece. Because of this, many of the exhibits are of particular interest from the standpoint of art and ingenuity.

Formation of Pearls

A pearl is formed by a secretion that becomes pearly nacre, the identical substance forming the inner lining of the shell, around some foreign substance which has found its way into the shell but has not been aborted. The intruder, he it a grain of sand or a piece of shell, causes irritation and, as a means of selfprotection, a film of secretion is laid upon it. In the case of round pearls, a "pearl sac" usually grows around the intruder and the inner surface of the sac hardens and becomes a layer of pearl. As succeeding layers form the pearl increases in size and value.

Lee's Invasion of Pennsylvania

The Dictionary of American Biography states that General Lee's invasion of Pennsylvania, which resulted in the Battle of Gettysburg, July 1, 2 and 3, 1863, was undertaken for three reasons. (1) to supply his army; (2) to strengthen pence sentiment in the North by showing the futility of the effort to force the South Into submission; (3) in hopes that he could compet Lincoln to detach troops from the far South and thereby relieve the pressure on Vicksburg. This hard-fought battle is often regarded by historians as the turning point of the Civil i war.
